

BERMAN BEGINS TO PANIC?

David Berman posted this on Sept. 8, '08 on Ron Johnson's OP-ED blog:

“One of the things that characterizes how Bob Frank uses his blog is that he is a coward. Apparently he and others are afraid to associate their names with their anonymous posts over there, which makes one wonder why they are too cowardly to stand up for their beliefs. A very curious thing coming from a person who pays lip service to fighting secrecy in the Association but makes it his own trademark. He and his colleagues are obviously afraid of SOMETHING.”

This is just the latest outrage of literally thousands of hateful and retaliatory words written by David Berman on his site and Ron Johnson's site about my husband and many other residents during the past few years. And, since we are also aware that he has written many more thousands of words of frequently hateful attacks on public blogs in the past decade, we have to accept that he has a serious personal problem.

Why would someone who is a suspended attorney and a self-admitted forger want to publicly accuse a combat-decorated, retired senior officer of being a coward? That makes no sense! Why would he think ANYONE would think that kind of action was appropriate conduct for the spouse of the Board President and a former board member himself?

Since David Berman is clearly not joking, what is his true purpose? He is desperately trying to divert attention away from the growing exposures his misconduct over the years have created instead of accepting personal responsibility.

Kay Frank

PS.

For those who are not aware of it, Anthem VOICE Blog has always been a group effort in support of the Sun City Anthem community. Articles published under Admin and VOICE identifications on this blog and on www.anthemvoice.org are a collaborative effort by multiple members.

This approach helps to focus attention on the issues. It has also helps to discourage the kind of unwarranted personal attacks you see from David Berman, Carl Weinstein and their hyena pack—since they can not be certain of who to chase.